Why Pulse for Nile. Nile sells commercial and residential. Reach makes offers faster. Pulse turns every offer into knowledge the company keeps: which brokerage asks for what, who has gone quiet, and who to call first at a new launch.

What changes for Nile

Brokers get answers fast

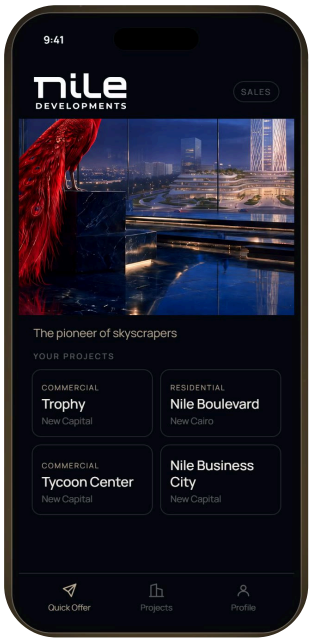

A broker asks on WhatsApp. The sales agent finds the unit, picks the payment plan and sends an offer PDF or a WhatsApp post in Nile's brand. Our recorded run took 48 seconds, at a practised pace.

Nothing is lost

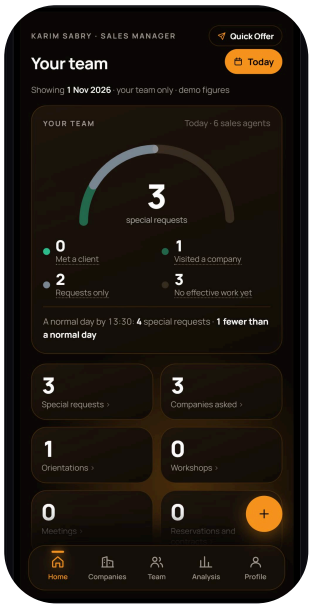

Each offer records itself: who sent it, which company, which unit, which plan. A company's history stays with Nile when a sales agent leaves.

Managers act on facts

Every manager sees which companies are active, gone quiet, inactive or have never asked, and can plan the week from that.

A design for Nile, from your public website. Your app will use your real projects.

Team Pulse, the manager's first screen. Demo figures and an invented team.

What management gets from Pulse

These views fill from real activity. They start on the day your team starts, and they grow stronger every week.

A full record for every brokerage

Requests, meetings, reservations and contracts, and who worked with each company.

Classification based on data

Rank brokerages on what they actually did, not on their name or size.

A call list for every launch

See which companies focus on residential and which on commercial, from what they really asked for.

Real demand

The most requested project, unit and payment plan, kept apart from what your own team pushed.

A weekly plan for each manager

Who to call, who to visit and who to leave alone, agent by agent.

Reports in one click

PDF reports for managers and senior management.

We quote no uplift figures. Every number you will see will be your own.

Who sees what

Each person sees what is theirs. A manager sees their own team only.
